FUSION WITH A MULTICULTURAL TWIST

THE CAMPBELL HOUSE RE-OPENS BY NICK POUST

Looking at The Campbell House Inn and Restaurant's menu, it is no wonder co-owner and chef Brett Rauber has a difficult time classifying the food he serves. After all, many countries are represented. Dig into Spanish empanadas, Greek lamb spanakopita, Italian lasagna, Thai mushroom spring rolls or French chicken paillard, just to name a few. After some thought, he described his food as "multicultural cuisine as someone taught French technique would do it."

The Campbell House, which was built in 1892, welcomed new ownership this past October when Rauber and his father re-opened the restaurant. Wednesday through Saturday, guests are treated to an array of imaginative, unique and artfully prepared dishes that may look minimal but are deceptively filling, satisfying and comforting. A wide variety of wines complement the appetizers, salads, soups and entrees nicely, and carefully crafted desserts such as cheesecake or apple crisp with a dollop of ice cream can cap off the meal.

Rauber says his restaurant is high-end and its service is exceptional, but, amid dim mood lighting with a date-night feel, he doesn't characterize the atmosphere as frou-frou.

"It's not a stuffy environment," he says. "It's very laidback." The Campbell House Inn and Restaurant seats up to 30, and with its spacious layout, it doesn't feel overcrowded. "We don't pack people in," he says. "We have plenty of space. It's very leisurely and relaxing."

Rauber partly attributes his love for the multicultural dishes he creates to his time as a patron in New York restaurants, where he was around many different kinds of food, whether he was in a fine or casual dining environment.

He was influenced even more by his time in Chicago, where he worked in restaurants and continued to learn about dishes and the tricks of the trade. While there, he was told that owning a restaurant could be compared to a theater production, and he treats The Campbell House Inn and Restaurant as such.

"The table is the stage and the diners are the stars," he says. To satisfy those stars, he stresses the importance on spicing up the cuisine and not just giving diners a dish that is served elsewhere.

"Even though people say they want whatever is in season, I think a lot of diners, when push comes to shove, want some kind of hybrid," he says. "They don't want that degree of rigidity."

Whether he is serving chicken, lamb, pork belly or wild salmon, Rauber lets his imagination produce art on a plate, but as visually stimulating as it is now, he wants to improve upon his creativity.

"I do want to be more playful with cuisine," he says. "You do eat with your eyes first, and I think a lot of times I get the sense that once the server puts the plate down, people get really excited to eat it. They feel like they have found a gem. I think that's something that we really like, offering that sense of discovery to people. That it's a little bit different than what I'm getting most nights out in Eugene." ■

DREAMING UP EUROPEAN PASTRIES WITH A SOUTHWESTERN TWIST BY BRIAN PALMER

In July 2012, Jennifer Petersen, Beau Mollinary and Aaron Nankin — three transplants from Utah, Texas and Connecticut, respectively — opened Chaos Kolaches in Springfield, hoping to introduce this Czechoslovakian pastry to the area. It was little more than a shot in the dark.

“We realized there weren’t any kolache places out here,” says Petersen. “We thought, ‘Well, it’ll be a new product nobody’s ever heard of so we’ll try it and see how it goes.’”

And the result?

“We were very, very wrong,” Petersen exclaims with a laugh. “We had no idea how many people were just like us and had been missing kolaches. Tons of Texans came in saying, ‘I haven’t had a kolache since college,’ or their childhood. So we definitely hit a nerve and have tapped into a nostalgic market we had no idea existed.”

Like pizza, the kolache takes on a variety of forms. The Moravian kolache is more cookie-like, while the Bohemian kolache is more yeast-based. You can put fruit filling in the middle, and though purists will disagree, you can also put meat, cheese or any number of other ingredients in there. Even outlandish ones.

“We made a diablo kolache,” Petersen says, “which had three kinds of peppers: habanero, jalapeno and chipotle. It was very spicy. Aaron had to wear a mask while he was prepping it.”

There is a lot of trial and error when making their creations — Petersen spent an entire year learning how to get the dough just right — and some of their best ones have come about accidentally.

“Aaron was in charge of pouring the Ghirardelli caramel on top of the apple kolaches one day and accidentally started pouring it all over the pear,” Petersen laughs. “So we were like, ‘What are you doing? That’s the pear!’ But now it’s one of our best sellers.”

Petersen and the store’s third owner, Mollinary, have known each other for almost two decades, when they worked for a business in Texas that owned several restaurants. Thanks to a large Czech population, kolaches are a popular treat in the Lone Star State.

Petersen and Mollinary have extensive restaurant experience, and Petersen loves cooking, so opening this shop was a no-brainer, especially considering how well the kolache has fared in the Midwest.

“Kolaches are big throughout the Midwest,” Petersen says. “There are lots of Czechoslovakian communities out there, and it’s part of their way of life. We always took kolaches to study groups when we were in college, and we thought it was like any coffee shop or donut shop. We thought they were everywhere.”

Perhaps the best part of this experience for Petersen has been watching the community and customers embrace the shop and get involved themselves.

“I have customers who bring in recipes all the time,” Petersen says. “One brought me a rhubarb recipe. Another suggested we do orange-cranberry. I’ll try anything. The people here really get into it and are excited about it. And because of the popular demand we’re even going to do a kolache-making class because this is really a dying art.”

Not bad for a business they weren’t sure was going to work. ■

Chaos Kolaches is open M-F from 7 am to 2 pm and Sa 8 am to noon at 388 Q Street, Springfield.

MIKE RAMIREZ PREPARES A RICE BOWL FOR STUDENTS

GLOBAL EATERS

UO DORM FOOD FOR ALL

BY SHANNON FINNELL

Stranded on the east side of UO campus with minimal time to grab a bite? Your options are greater than you think, and they start right on campus — with dorm food that puts dorm food stereotypes to shame. UO's Global Scholars Hall has Fresh Marketcafé, a mish-mash of deli food and "global flavors," and anyone can eat there.

The vision for Fresh Marketcafé came from the students, says Food Services Director Tom Driscoll. "We have a food forum; I meet with students weekly to get feedback and stay abreast of changes in the things that students are interested in, in terms of food." Residents told him they wanted food that is local, sustainable, fresh and homemade, and they were interested in global and international flavors. Driscoll and Dining Services blended those concepts to a market with deli items, a sushi station, Vietnamese-style spring rolls, pasta dishes, rice bowls, bakery items, coffee drinks and smoothies.

Driscoll says that in the past, a lot of Eugeneans and UO faculty might not have realized they could stop by the residence halls for a bite, and he thinks that it has something to do with the architecture.

"Some of our buildings don't feel welcoming to somebody from the outside," he says. "There's no exterior signage that would tell them there's food here and it's OK to come in."

But the Global Scholars Hall and the Living Learning Center, a hall that opened in 2006, have public first floors with classrooms and food, and Driscoll says that's changing things. "On game days now we'll see people that are parking in the parking lots on this side of campus, walking to Matt Knight Arena or even en route to Autzen, and they'll stop to get brunch and then head onto the game," he says.

Driscoll says the community is probably interested in the same things that the students asked for. "I think it's a trend that's countrywide," he says. "People are interested in where their food comes from and are interested in foods that are local, so we work really hard to bring in local products and use fresh-made products as much as possible." This means that Fresh Marketcafé's wheat berries, lentils and black beans are local items, and the smoothies have Nancy's Yogurt kefir. The café also serves sweet and fresh carrot juice, fresh wheat grass and fresh-squeezed lime juice.

So far, Driscoll says, he's been getting positive feedback from students. "They like the fact that we use a lot of local foods and they like that we prepare foods from scratch," he says. Among the most popular items are the rice bowls, which come in options like shoyu chicken, Thai beef satay and lemongrass tofu.

Let that destroy your notions of dorm food — kids today don't have to walk to school barefoot in the snow, uphill both ways any more, either. ■

Fresh Marketcafé is open 7 am-10 pm M-F and 10 am-10 pm Sa-Su; info at housing.uoregon.edu/dining

A WISH for FISH

SEAFOOD CAFÉ BRINGS THE OCEAN TO EUGENE

BY AMY SCHNEIDER

Alder Street Fish Co. is difficult to categorize. Not quite a full-on restaurant, yet far from a typical fish-and-chips stand, this seafood café is a new addition to the smattering of coffee places and restaurants around East 13th Avenue near the UO campus.

"It's been great," says owner Bill Brand, who launched Alder Street Fish Co. in early November. "I've got a real enthusiasm for seafood, given where we live. I've always wanted to do something with seafood, and it's a very sellable premise here on campus."

The dinnertime flow of students confirms Brand's statement as they enter, seeking refuge from the cold, and exit with warm bags of seafood. Some customers choose to linger inside the café, crowding around tables as they devour their baskets of fishy goodness. Because of its small size and cozy setting, Alder Street Fish Co. is a natural choice when taking shelter from a stormy Oregon day.

"It's fantastic," says Sam Robison, a repeat customer. "They really know how to make fish and chips. First off, the fries are great; I love waffle fries in general. And for real breaded fish, it's not that greasy at all."

The fish are Panko-breaded, giving them a lighter feel than other kinds of battered fish. But don't think that fish and chips are the full extent of what Alder Street Fish Co. has to offer. While the delight of fried food is hard to resist, Brand's menu consists of more than batter-coated fare, and he says that he "takes a lot of pride in culinary finesse."

As an added bonus, Brand is committed to environmental responsibility. "We use sustainably harvested seafood as much as we can," Brand says, "and all of our seafood is wild-caught."

With that in mind, ocean lovers can breathe easy and fully appreciate the quality of the menu at Alder Street Fish Co. Topping the popularity list, Brand says, are the mahi-mahi fish tacos and the butter cod sandwich. When paired with aioli sauce, the sandwich takes on a Mediterranean flavor, composed of smoked paprika, lemon and garlic. Gluten-free clam chowder is served daily, and it's made with no bacon, rendering it safe for pescatarian diners.

"It's really creamy and delicious," according to Preston Carmack, a musician who stopped in to try the chowder.

The non-seafood item on the menu, a burger served on a brioche bun, is "the best burger on campus," Brand says. Made with beef raised on Ninkasi's spent grains, the burger is reminiscent of grilling outdoors during the summer, an invigorating flavor during the colder months.

"I don't think you can use poetic language to characterize what's special about that beef," Brand says. "It has such a fresh taste."

Barbeque salmon and salmon burgers round out the menu, making a classy ensemble of normally grab-and-go food. So next time the flavors of the sea are beckoning, give Alder Street Fish Co. a try for a complete seafood experience — minus the ocean. ■

Alder Street Fish Co., 1239 Alder St., is open 11 am to 8 pm M-F.

TOKYO TONKATSU

HANDMADE HEALTHY JAPANESE FOOD ON BROADWAY BY SHANNON FINNELL

Eugene's downtown menu of restaurants is blooming well ahead of spring. One of the next to open up, around Feb. 16 at 201 W. Broadway, is Tokyo Tonkatsu.

Tonkatsu, for those who haven't happened upon it, is a breaded, deep-fried pork cutlet dish invented in Japan in 1899. While it's a widely beloved dish, it's not all the restaurant will serve — the menu includes deep-fried chicken, fried shrimp, sushi rolls, salads and katsudon, which is fried pork cooked with an egg and sweet sauce on rice.

Restaurant owners Hirofumi Kamazuka and Kyounghee Choi, also husband and wife, own Milky Way Bagel and Tokyo Ramen as well. "It's kind of so they can showcase different things that they can serve," says Tokyo Ramen Manager Ayako Smith. Both owners have long backgrounds in food; Kamazuka learned ramen-making for three years in Japan, and Choi owned a successful kimchi business in Japan, though her specialty is tonkatsu. "They also want to have a couple of restaurants because they like cooking and it's their passion," Smith says.

She says that salads will come with unique dressings like peach, orange, avocado and berry. The business has also hired a chef to make desserts, rolls and mochi, which are Japanese sticky rice confections that can be used in different dishes or a la carte.

Smith says Kamazuka and Choi focus on keeping their food handmade and healthy, with no additives like MSG, so they make things like pot sticker skins and noodles from scratch.

"Because it's their food, they really try to focus on making it healthy. It's not like fast food; it's not packaged and sent out food," she says. "It's very from the heart." ■

Tokyo Tonkatsu will open at 201 W. Broadway in mid-February.

SIZZLIN' SOUTH

PORTLAND'S SIZZLE PIE TO OPEN
EUGENE LOCATION BY KEVIN PIASKOWSKI

Can you smell it yet? Are you catching the waft of fresh, authentic pizza pies slowly migrating down from Eugene's northern sibling city? If not, then expect them to arrive soon to add to Eugene's unique set of pizza places. Portland's overwhelmingly popular pizza haven, Sizzle Pie, is opening a new location in the heart of downtown Eugene.

As if it was a sort of culinary battle cry, Sizzle Pie boldly declares, "Death to false pizza!" The Portland-born-and-bred company is dedicated to changing the way we think about (and eat) pizza. With an expansive menu that accommodates carnivores, vegetarians and vegans alike, Sizzle Pie's alternative approach can appeal to the diverse masses. Couple that with hours that span from lunch to late as hell and a location right smack in the center of Eugene's downtown bar scene, pizza won't be much of a hard sell.

"We have always loved coming down to Eugene," says Bob Peyton, director of operations. "We've seen it grow and want to be part of the great expansion of the downtown area. We thought it was a really good fit for our style."

On the appeal of downtown, Peyton says, "It has a really good energy; it's infectious." Moreover, Peyton believes that the Sizzle Pie menu will appeal to the Eugene community. "I think people are going to be pretty impressed," Peyton adds. "We want to bring a different take on pizza."

Sizzle Pie owners pride themselves on its recipes, atmosphere and culture. "We work really hard on our menu," Peyton says. "The menu includes recipes like the 'Don Caballero,' a combination of pepperoni, sausage, green peppers and onion, or the Wu-Tang inspired '36 Chambers,' an assembly of cilantro pepita pesto, olive oil and ricotta. Vegans will find solace in pies with ingredients like Daiya vegan cheese and creamy basil cashew spread. Moreover, they offer a gluten-free option.

While pizza is, of course, the focal point of Sizzle Pie, Peyton takes the atmosphere and service just as seriously. "I think we've become popular because our service is good, our employees are passionate and we set a good mood," he says. "I think it's that ethos that we create that makes it pretty unique. We want to bring the 'pizza party' on a daily basis whether it's 11 am or 3:30 am and you're just coming in for a slice." ■

Sizzle Pie is expected to open at 910 Willamette St. in March but is currently under construction and acquiring permits. See sizzlepie.com for menu and info.

SWEET & SPICY HAZELNUTS

FROM RIVER BEND FARM & PLEASANT HILL ORCHARD

During the winter months, River Bend Farm's produce stand is closed to allow them to prune the many fruit and nut trees on their property, but you can still find their produce at a couple of places around town: On Saturdays starting in January, you can find them at the Hideaway Bakery Farmers Market (behind Mazzi's on East Amazon), and in February, look for them at the Winter Farmers Market in Eugene. In addition to nuts, it's still the season for fresh apples and Asian pears, both of which would be a good accompaniment to these sweet hazelnuts with just the right bit of kick.

- 2 1/2 cup dried hazelnuts
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1 tsp cayenne pepper
- 1 1/2 tsp kosher salt (or other coarse salt)
- 1 tbsp honey
- 1 tsp olive oil (or vegetable oil if you prefer)
- 1 tbsp water

Preheat your oven to 350 degrees and toast the nuts on a baking sheet. Toast about 10 minutes and stir around halfway through this roasting process. While you are doing this, combine the sugar, salt and cayenne pepper in a large bowl and set aside.

In a large skillet (preferably a cast iron), cook the honey, oil and water over medium heat until all is combined. This takes about a minute. Add the hazelnuts and stir till coated. Turn off heat.

Dump hazelnuts into the bowl with the sugar (don't scrape any extra glaze into the bowl). Toss to coat, then spread the hazelnuts on a cookies sheet lined with pastry paper or waxed paper. Store in an airtight container.

Seasonal. Local. Organic.

Open for Lunch, Dinner, Wine Tasting, Tours and Weekend Brunch

The Restaurant at King Estate offers exquisite cuisine in a spectacular setting. Our menu is based on ultra-local, seasonal produce, much of it grown within sight of the kitchen door, and designed to complement our array of award-winning wines.

SQUASH RAVIOLI WITH PEAR GASTRIQUE

FROM KOHO BISTRO

Chef Jeff Strom and his wife and business partner Angela Chan knew what they wanted when they were looking for restaurant spaces. Opening in the former Koho Bistro space, which was already set up with a kitchen, allowed them to get cooking quickly. But other than the name, their Koho Bistro has nothing in common with the former occupants.

"My menu changes seasonally and everything is locally sourced and as minimally processed as possible when it comes in the back door," says Strom. "We offer fresh, innovative foods prepared from scratch." He makes his own charcuterie, and offers a fair number of game dishes in the winter, such as braised rabbit and stuffed quail. Colorful and creative salads, such as chickpea and carrot with apple thyme vinaigrette, satisfy the vegetarians. Bartender Cory Westbrook mixes up craft cocktails, including his own infusions, that pair well with the food. "Service is really friendly, too," says Chan, the manager. "We want our guests to have a great experience." Strom puts in hours or even days of prep work behind each dish, and the final result reflects that care and expertise.

To finish this dish, you will need some white wine for deglazing, a handful of apple slices, and the prepared ravioli, with some reserved chopped tarragon and lemon juice. Chef Strom tops the dish with chopped hazelnuts, goat cheese and hazelnut oil.

SQUASH PUREE:
2 cups assorted winter squash, roasted
2 cups whole milk
1 cup heavy cream
1 bunch tarragon, chopped

FARRO ARANCINI

FROM FALLING SKY BREWERY

Falling Sky is Eugene's newest brewpub, serving handcrafted beer and soda and locally sourced food. Chef Corey Wisun has an excellent local pedigree: He was a founder of both Field to Table catering and the Nosh Pit food cart, both of which utilized only fresh, local and seasonal ingredients. "I love arancini, also known as fried risotto balls," he says. "My take on this classic uses farro. I get ours locally from Camas Country Mill. I also add kale and goat cheese, different than the usual herbs and mozzarella. They're warm, comforting and great to share!"

FARROTTO:
4 c chicken stock
(or veg stock to keep it vegetarian)
1/4 c butter
1/2 c shallot, minced
1/4 c garlic, minced
1 pound cracked farro
1/2 c white wine, like chardonnay
kosher salt & pepper to taste

Start by heating your stock in a pot. Then, heat butter in dutch oven till melted. Add shallot & garlic, sauté 3 to 4 min. Add farro & stir to combine. Add the wine and scrape the bits at the bottom of your Dutch oven. Once wine has evaporated, 3 to 4 minutes, start ladling hot stock into your farro. Add enough to cover farro and keep at a simmer. Once the liquid has been absorbed, add a little more & repeat. When all liquid has been absorbed and your stock is gone, your farro should have a creamy feel, keeping the texture of the grain. Season with salt & pepper to taste, remove from heat and reserve.

FILLING:
1 bunch italian kale, rough chopped
3 oz goat cheese

Sauté kale till wilted. Stir in goat cheese. Place kale cheese mixture into a food processor and process till smooth. Stir mixture into farrotto till combined. Cool farrotto in the refrigerator, on a sheet pan, for 4 hours or overnight.

ARANCINI:
2 1/2 qts canola oil
2 c unseasoned breadcrumbs, finely ground
salt & pepper to taste

Heat oil to 350. Take farrotto and ball out 1-ounce portions. Roll lightly in breadcrumbs. Fry the balls, careful not to overcrowd, for 3 to 5 minutes or until golden brown. Season with salt and pepper. Serve immediately with your favorite tomato sauce and grated cheese.

KALE SALAD

FROM ELIN ENGLAND, AUTHOR OF
EATING CLOSE TO HOME: A GUIDE TO LOCAL SEASONAL SUSTENANCE IN THE PACIFIC NORTHWEST

Elin England is working on a follow-up to her 2009 book of local, seasonal recipes with a book about locally grown beans, grains, nuts and seeds called The Fourth Cornerstone. Expected to publish in March or April, the book represents the "fourth cornerstone" in the platforms that support our locally sourced food. Local bean and grain growers approached England because they wanted people to feel comfortable using their products.

go out to the garden and chew on them. This salad will change as the season changes."

England takes simple recipes like this and varies them. Try the kale raw. Try it with other greens. And rather than soy sauce and sesame oil, try olive oil and lemon juice. Orange, lime and lemon juice and zest can be frozen for use anytime. England's new book will be available at Tsunami Books, as well as through Lulu.com, Amazon.com and EugeneLocalFoods.com

"People who are eating seasonally can get discouraged if they try to make everything taste like it does in summer," England says. To her, the key is to be flexible in your palette of what you work with in winter. "Really get into how good kale is now, because it's so sweet when we have a frost. Really embrace how rich the root vegetables are, and celebrate them right now." And enjoy the changes in the vegetables over the season. "Right now we're eating the leaves that came in the summer and fall," she says. "Toward spring the kale plants will start putting out the new growth, and the young leaves and the blossoms will be sweeter. I just

1 bunch kale
1 1/2 tbsp soy sauce
1 tbsp sesame oil
1 clove garlic, pressed
1-inch chunk of ginger, grated

Rinse a bunch of kale. Cut out the tough inner ribs, then slice the leaves into ribbons. Steam until the kale is slightly wilted, about 3 to 5 minutes. When cool, toss with a mix of 1 1/2 tablespoons soy sauce, 1 tablespoon sesame oil, 1 clove garlic (pressed) and a 1-inch chunk of fresh ginger (grated). Serve at room temperature. During summer when it is in season, you can do the same thing with chard.

BREAD PUDDING

FROM NOISETTE PASTRY KITCHEN

"Noisette" means hazelnut in French, so you would be forgiven for thinking that Noisette is a French bakery. In fact, it's much more than that. Sovak and her husband Michael Landsberg honed their skills in Eugene's finest kitchens, from Marche to King Estate. Finally, they're bringing their experience to their own establishment. "It's really more of a café," Sovak says. "We always have sweet and savory morning pastries, tarts, pot pies through the winter, at least three sandwiches and at least three soups." Landsberg prepares his own pork confit, chicken liver pate, lamb and corned beef — and of course, Sovak creates the most delectable sweets such as cupcakes, croissants, brioche, cookies and cakes. Noisette also means browned butter, an ingredient that features prominently in her recipes.

Noisette opened in October 2012, and the owners have been responsive in fine-tuning their menu based on the requests they get from customers, including gluten-free items, off-site catering and wedding cakes. One aspect of their business that they haven't compromised on is their desire for "grab and go" fare. Sandwiches are wrapped, salads and patés are packaged, and pot pies are ready to pop into the oven for those who want something quick for take out. Tables are inside for leisurely meetings and lingering over the Bostock (brioche in almond syrup baked with almond cream), or this beautiful bread pudding.

1 to 2 loaves bread (preferably Brioche)
cut into cubes
3 cups milk
3 cups cream
1 1/2 cup brown sugar, packed
11 large eggs

In a large pot, heat the milk, cream, and brown sugar, whisking occasionally. Meanwhile, crack the eggs into a large bowl. Temper the eggs with the hot cream mixture. Cool down the liquid slightly.

Put the bread in a large casserole or a 9-by-13-inch baking pan. Pour the custard over the bread. Allow to soak in for 15 to 20 minutes. Mix in any fruit and flavorings (recipe follows). Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Cook in a hot water bath, covered, for 1 hour or until set but still jiggly.

CARAMEL APPLE FILLING:
2 to 3 apples (mix sweet and tart)
2 to 3 tbsp butter
1/2 cup sugar
1 tsp cinnamon

Peel apples and cut into medium-thin slices. Get a large sauté pan hot. Add butter to melt over the bottom of the pan. Add some apples. Do not crowd the pan. You can do this in batches if your pan is not big enough to hold all the apples at once. Sauté the fruit for a minute or two. Add sugar and cinnamon. Continue to cook until apples are cooked through and sugar is beginning to caramelize.
